Editorial - Free public forum about dementia presented by Alzheimers Taranaki...

Message... from Lance Girling-Butcher

Many look at old age as the sunset years and shroud them in a golden mist, but for many older New Zealanders, time on Earth ends in pain, misery, and disillusionment.

For most people aging means a slow and uncomfortable deterioration in physical and mental condition. In the worst cases, people totally lose the ability to move or think and disappear into a mumbling incoherent demented mess.

Comedian Bob Hope said, you have to be brave to grow old.

Despite some hopeful developments and discoveries over the past 10 years, many things to do with the brain, little is fully understood about dementia, but the undeniable fact is dementia devastates the lives of its victims and leaves grieving family and friends mourning.

The results of 250 known types of dementia are that they are irreversible, however there are preventative techniques which can delay or even hold this damage.

To assist people in better understanding of this devastating disease, New Plymouth, Positive Ageing, Grey Power and Age Concern are holding a free public seminar in the New Plymouth District Council Chambers on the morning of Thursday, November 23, starting at 10am.

Speakers from Alzheimers Taranaki will be informing those attending about dementia, the various forms it can take and what support is available to best manage the symptoms.

There will NOT be a free bus leaving the TSB Stadium and going to the NPDC before this event and returning following it.

Participants may decide to utilise the parking spaces at the YMCA for just $1 per hour. Simply pay at the YMCA office.

MY HOUSEKEEPING STYLE IS BEST DESCRIBED AS "THERE APPEARS TO HAVE BEEN A STRUGGLE"

Ageing in Place ...

Ageing in place is the idea that older people can continue to live independently in their own homes or communities for as long as possible as they age, with appropriate support. It is a desirable goal for many older people who value their independence, familiarity with their community and surroundings, and social connections.

There are many benefits to ageing in place, including improved quality of life, reduced healthcare costs, and increased social connections. This can help to reduce the risk of depression which are common problems for older people who are isolated from their communities.

However, ageing in place requires a supportive infrastructure to provide the necessary supports for older people and currently there are gaps to providing this in Aotearoa. This infrastructure can include: accessible and affordable housing, transportation options, health care services, and community support networks.

Without these, ageing in place can lead to social isolation which studies have shown to be a major contributor to poor wellbeing.

In addition, ageing in place should be a choice – not a necessity for those who would prefer but cannot find aged residential care in their community.

As the population continues to age, it is becoming increasingly important to ensure that these support systems are in place to help older people remain independent and engaged in their communities.

Access Radio... supporting Positive Ageing with a regular weekly programme...

'Positively Ageing' is an initiative between long-standing community based entities - Access Radio, Positive Ageing NP and Driving Miss Daisy.

Each Monday morning from 10 - 10.30am, Positive Ageing will have a 30min time slot on Access Radio Taranaki to promote aspects of 'positively ageing'.

Ageism, Stigma and Discrimination towards older adults...

IN THE PERSON IN ADDRESS OF

Stigmatisation of older people is created by bias, prejudice, stereotyping, guilt, exclusion, ignorance and arrogance.

Stigma enables people to devalue the contribution older adults have made to society, and to exclude them from inclusion in decisionmaking and participation in their communities of interest.

Without inclusion in decision making, or having opportunities to provide input into decision-making, the needs of older adults often become overlooked or ignored.

Stigma impacts on the ability of older adults to be able to access resources and opportunities in their communities. It can lead to low self-esteem, isolation and a sense of hopelessness.

It deters the public, institutions and politicians from adequately understanding and appreciating the needs of older adults and can lead to inadequately resourcing health and social services for older adults.

It can deprive people of their dignity and their participation in their communities of interest.

Stigma demonstrates a lack of understanding, and compassion of the ageing process and the people it most affects.

Stigma can lead people to feel flawed, ostracised, unneeded and unwanted.

OMG, i have finally Discovered what's wrong with my
side, there is nothing
right, and on the right side, there is

Closely associated with stigma and discrimination towards older adults is ageism. Stigma and discrimination are rife in health services in Aotearoa/New Zealand.

When older adults see institutions clearly excluding them from participation in aspects of their institutions, clearly ignoring any sense of need or value to the contributions older adults can make regardless of their lived experience, then it is little wonder that many older adults feel slighted.

NZ Doctor recently stated that, 'Ageism is deeply embedded in our society and institutions, and we are products of that society and operate in its institutions'.

There is a need to address ageism, stigma and discrimination in our communities of interests, particularly in our health institutions.

There can be no excuse for not taking these matters seriously. We cannot allow our institutions to belittle our lived experience of our health needs.

Older adults recognise that, despite their having experiences of raising the very young, youth, adults and middle aged, does not mean that we would consider ourselves experts on advising and taking up causes for these age groups in particular. Neither should the young feel they can advocate for the needs of older adults.

Fear not getting old and confused... there will be help on hand...

Recently my partner and I had a puncture on Highway Three as we were heading to Auckland.

We pulled over into a wide driveway, unpacked the car boot, got out the replacement tyre and equipment, placed the jack in the wrong place on the car and could not get the car high enough to change the tyre.

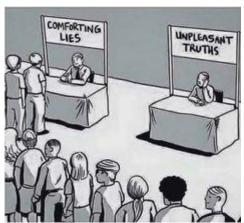

Clearly we must have looked bewildered as to what we needed to do next. So much so that three cars stopped to offer us a hand. Three people from one car from Taranaki ended up being our Samaritans.

They confided that they were driving past, saw our predicament and thought that those old people looked like we needed help.

We were tickled pink that they stopped to help us and with their comments about helping out a couple of old people in distress!

Clearly, we have entered the age of the elderly and occasionally bewildered. A friend told me, that in his culture, Maoridom, I had simply received a promotion. We can happily live with that.

Comment: Gordon Hudson

Hearing loss is frustrating for those who have it as it is for their loved ones. But recent research from Johns Hopkins reveals that it also is linked with walking problems, falls and even dementia.

In a study that tracked 639 adults for nearly 12 years, Johns Hopkins expert Frank Lin, M.D., Ph.D., and his colleagues found that mild hearing loss doubled dementia risk. Moderate loss tripled risk, and people with a severe hearing impairment were five times more likely to develop dementia.

"Brain scans show us that hearing loss may contribute to a faster rate of atrophy in the brain," Lin says. "Hearing loss also contributes to social isolation. You may not want to be with people as much, and when you are you may not engage in conversation as much. These factors may contribute to dementia."

As you walk, your ears pick up subtle cues that help with balance. Hearing loss mutes these important signals, Lin notes. "It also makes your brain work harder just to process sound. This subconscious multitasking may interfere with some of the mental processing needed to walk safely." https://www.hopkinsmedicine.org/health/wellness-and-prevention/the-hidden-risks-of-hearing-loss

True Blue sweeps Taranaki firmly to the right...

A combination of a serious mood for change and a strong campaign saw the New Plymouth seat change from Red to Blue... convincingly.

The local campaign was undertaken with style, grace and humour. Newcomer politician, David MacLeod is well respected in Taranaki. His chairing of the Taranaki Regional Council and many other business interests enabled him to compete with the high profile Glen Bennett. Congratulations Mr MacLeod.

There will be many aspects of society that will welcome a change in government, particularly in the rural and business communities, just as there will be many sectors of the communities more social sector that will be disappointed with the loss of Labour and MP Glen Bennett.

Positive Ageing NP, along with many other organisations will be keen to establish a close working relationship with new MP David MacLeod and wish him well in both settling into his role, and hopefully, into cabinet responsibilities.

Getting boosted is the best way you can support your own health, that of your family/whanau, other friends & your wider community.

Glen Bennett earned a well earnt 29th ranking on the Labour Party list and may well yet earn a place in the Labour team. Good luck with that Mr. Bennett.

A significant loss to the New Plymouth electorate has been long term senior Labour Party MP, Andrew Little, MP for Everything.

Very few MPs have worked so hard in politics as has Andrew Little and his resignation will be a major disappointment to a wide sector of Aotearoa/New Zealand. All the very best for the future Mr Little.

Dementia is a collective term that describes a series of symptoms associated with gradual memory decline. It is not one specific disease, rather a symptom of several underlying diseases and is not a normal part of ageing.

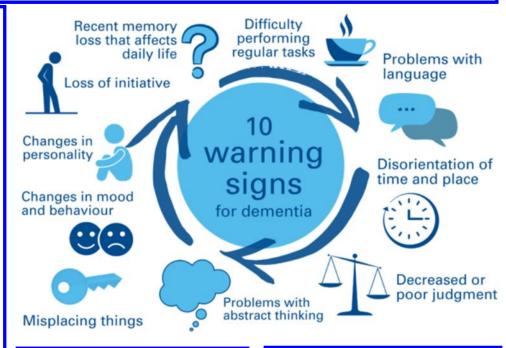

These changes can affect memory, thinking, behavior, personality and emotion. Every person with dementia is affected differently.

Because dementia is a progressive syndrome, symptoms will gradually develop and change.

Symptoms may be due to disorders other than dementia and can lessen or disappear with appropriate treatment.

The most common form of dementia is Alzheimers disease. This accounts for 60 to 80 percent of cases of dementia in Aotearoa/New Zealand. Other forms include vascular, frontotemporal, lewy body and alcohol related dementia.

There is no known cure for Alzheimers, but as science progresses there is hope that medicines and other therapies can be developed to delay, prevent or maybe reverse the process.

Although there is no cure for dementia, there is a lot of help available. Early diagnosis gives the best opportunity to benefit from practical and emotional support and to understand what the future may hold. First step - your GP.

This also gives an opportunity for some forward planning such as writing an Advanced Care Plan and/or appointing an Enduring Power of Attorney.

Locally, Te Whatu Ora Taranaki's Mental Health Services for Older People have a wonderful team of professionals to provide clinical advice and support.

Of great support too are Alzheimers Taranaki. Their staff are well trained, caring and knowledgeable, offering an array of culturally sensitive and appropriate services and support.

A young man was walking through a supermarket picking up a few things when he noticed an old lady following him around. Thinking nothing of it, he ignored her and continued on.

Finally, as he went to the checkout, she squeezed in front of him. "Pardon me." she said, "I'm sorry if my staring at you has made you feel uncomfortable. It's just that you look just like my son. He died recently." "I'm very sorry", replied the young man, is there anything I can do for you?" "Yes", she said, "As I'm leaving, can you say "Goodbye Mother"? It would make me feel much better.

As the old woman was leaving, he called out "Goodbye Mother!" As he stepped up to the checkout counter, he saw that his total was $127.50. "How can that be?" he asked. "I only purchased a few things!" "Your mother said that you would pay for her," said the checkout operator.
